colony really requires is a Municipal Council, and that could probably be had for the a Municipal Council is essentially an execusites purchased for Queen's College and the Central Market, and when it is finally dealt to any extent, but the circumstances as rematter is not one on which it would be necessary to consult the Legislative Council. If we had a Municipal Council, however, the matter would be entirely under the carrived at by a body of practical business requirements of the colony than by one or sibility. Every other community under English jurisdiction is allowed to manage its own municipal affairs, and we fail to see why Hongkong should be an exception to the rule. A Municipal Council is not such cil, but, in the circumstances of this colony, it would be more useful. Its mombers would not be styled "Honograble," they count:-The roturn Rugby match against the would not be entitled to write "M.L.C."

> esterday. Lord Salisbury declared that it was ridiculous and contemptible on the part of the Government to propose to maintain the House of Lorde as a sham while destroying it in reality. The Government, he said, were engaged in mere sterile contests, while neglecting the vital interests of the poor. Lord Rosebery said the measures announced n the Queen's Speech would be honestly submitted, and would be pressed so long as the Go-veroment had a majority in Parliament. Referring to the House of Lords, he said there was no precedent for referring in the Speech to the proposed resolution affirming the supremacy of the House of Commons. In the House of Commons the debate on the Address has so far been rather tame. Colonel Howard Vincent withdrew an amendment which he had proposed in favour of a Customs Union of the Empire, on Mr. Sydney Buxton, Parliamentary Secretary for the Colonies, promising that a bill would be introduced to enable the Australian colonies to enter into fiscal relations with other colonies. He said the Government wished to meet the requirements of the colonies as far as possible, and he hoped they would succeed in enlarging the volume of inter-
